Section 1 (Time: 45 minutes)

Part 1: Reading (Time: 30 minutes out of 45)
First read the following text very carefully.

There were several reasons why David and Anne Spenser thought they would like to live in Canada. They paid a three-week visit to Toronto to find work and somewhere to live. Above all they had to decide whether they would like Canada enough to want to spend the rest of their lives there. Here is Ann's story:

We flew for hours over the snow-covered mountains of North America. It seemed so empty compared with Europe. The 'No Smoking' sign went on. Then as we dropped through the clouds, we saw the lights of Toronto shining like jewels in the dark.

At last we landed. We got off the plane and went through customs into the American Continent, which might soon be our home. As we stood waiting for our luggage, we looked round hopefully for the friend who had offered to meet us.

Considering how much we had travelled round Europe, I was surprised to feel so nervous. We had read as much as we could find about Canada and had prepared the whole journey in detail. David, my husband, had written eighty letters to firms that might possibly offer him a job.

Why did we consider leaving Britain? Mainly because the last eleven years had been such a struggle. David had started his career in the Air Force but after a while had realized he had made a mistake. Aged thirty and with two children, he started at the bottom in industry. Now, his present firm, who had just given him a rise, were going on a three-day week. He had hardly known what to do next. Leaving Britain seemed to be the only answer.

We had left our two children with friends for the three weeks we would be in Canada. We were worried about being away for Michael's birthday, but he and Susan had smiled cheerfully as we left them at school.

"Don't worry about us, Mummy. Go and do your best."

As soon as we arrived in Toronto, we tried to decide if it would suit us. The houses had an almost Continental look about them. The Canadian winter is bitterly cold, but inside it was so warm we had only one blanket on the bed. At home it would have been unthinkable to have kept the heating on all night, or even during the middle of the day.

The next morning we drove into town. It was our first experience of a North American city. We had grown up in Europe and automatically looked for the city centre. We did not find it. We were lost.

We so much wanted to be pleased with this strange city and feel we might one day live there. But we had only three weeks, so we had to do things quickly.

In Toronto on a Saturday afternoon the offices and streets were empty. It was November. There was nothing to brighten the scene; only black office blocks. We almost gave up hope. Finally, we had dinner at our friend's flat. To cheer us up a little, she offered to take us to Niagara Falls next day.

It was difficult to make a fair comparison with England. Here, because everything was new to us, we noticed everything. The roads were fast and modern, even the new industrial areas seemed far cleaner than those at home.

Everyone must have seen pictures of Niagara Falls, but to us that day it seemed to describe the very spirit of Canada. We drove back through Niagara village on the banks of the lake, a beautiful old village with a very pretty church in excellent condition. Soon, however, we decided we had done enough sightseeing and had to begin work.

On Monday morning we took a tram into town and had great difficulty buying the tickets. It was not easy to get used to the different way of doing things. We felt lost.

So the first week went on. David had thirty interviews in all. It was very tiring. People were kind to him and nearly everyone he rang gave him an appointment, but most of them had nothing to offer. David was angry. He felt he had been wasting his time.

I found the Canadian way of life exciting. I was struck by the friendliness. For the first time, I found that I could be completely natural and friendly to strangers.

We decided to stay. David had a final interview and was offered a much better job than his last firm could afford. It seemed like a miracle. We were worn out but very excited as we got on the plane home and with us we took a future and hope for our children.

We have now been in Canada for a year. Our home is in a small country town twenty miles north of Toronto. We are pleased with our home and jobs, and the children are happy, too. All the Canadian children are busy in their spare time. They baby-sit or work in the holidays. Most of them are saving to go to college or travel in Europe.

Toronto is a clean, modern city with very little crime; a real advantage in North America. There are lots of theatres and shows. I miss the traditional English Christmas, though.

Everyone we meet tries hard to make us feel at home. All the same, the first year has not been easy. But now that we are settled here, none of us has any regrets, though we often have an ache within us for England.

For Questions 46-60, read the text below and decide which answer A, B, C or D best fits each space.

An unexpected present

Most people would be delighted to receive an invitation which offered them a free gift in return for doing very little. This was certainly the _____ (46) for twenty-nine people living in and _____ (47) the city of Lymeform when, _____ (48) time ago, they were promised _____ (49) presents for taking part in a survey into English eating _____ (50). All they had to do was to go to a hotel in the city on a _____ (51) date and answer a _____ (52) of questions.

All twenty-nine people _____ (53) at the hotel at the appointed time and, on arriving, went to a desk where their names and address were _____ (54). Then, to their complete and utter _____ (55), they were all arrested by the police and taken to court; all of them were criminals who had _____ (56) to appear in court on several previous _____ (57).

The whole operation was, of course, a trick to get the criminals to court and was _____ (58) of a national campaign which had _____ (59) months to organise. Although the twenty-nine people could not have been very pleased with what had happened, one of them was so _____ (60) by the trick that he actually congratulated the police when they told him who they were.
